Legal Studies

Frankfurt Summer School 2018

16 July – 10 August

Seminar Programme 1:

Legal Studies

„Law in a Globalized World - Fundamental, international and comparative aspects“

A. DESCRIPTION

The role of law in the 21st Century can and actually must be characterized as ambivalent. On the one hand, law competes increasingly with other paradigms, especially with the economic one; apart from that, the subordination of politics and power to the rule of law still remains a project rather than a reality in many parts of the world. On the other hand, the juridification of the German and other societies has increased immensely. More and more topics are becoming subject to legislation, and thus of national and international jurisdiction. In this situation an intense ascertainment of the new legal topics is required as a recall of the philosophical, historical and comparative fundamentals of Law.

B. COURSE OBJECTIVES

1. The summer school programme of the Law Faculty of the Goethe University aims at balancing these interdependent approaches to law and its subject areas using selected examples.
2. Developing a network between participants of the different regions and comparing the legal systems of different countries
3. By the end of the course, the participants' knowledge of the basics of the German legal system should have increased considerably.

C. COURSE PROGRAMME

The Course will consist of the lectures that address specific legal issues in the mornings on two to four days of the week. Subsequently to these legal lectures there will be German language courses.
